BROOKVILLE HIGH SCHOOL

BROOKVILLE, INDIANA

"THROUGH THESE DOORS"

Through These Doors pass the students of Brookville High School, some just starting their high school days and others about ready to take on the responsibilities of life.

Through These Doors the students are helped to realize the right route to success and are prepared as thoroughly as possible for the journey through life.

ADMINISTRATION

FACULTY

SUPERINTENDENT

The motto of this yearbook calls to mind two others. Over the doors of some retail establishments may be seen "Through these doors pass the finest people on earth- our customers." The other was popular some twenty-five years ago carved in stone on the front of high school buildings, "Enter ye to learn, leave ye to serve."

Through the doors of a school building pass the most valuable possession of a community - its youth. However, the full potential of these young people can be realized only if they do "enter to learn," enter with a will and determination to prepare themselves so that they can enjoy life to the fullest and make the greatest possible contribution to society.

Preparation through acquisition of knowledge and skills alone is not enough. There must also be developed an attitude, a dedication which will cause the student to "leave to serve" God and his fellow man.

PRINCIPAL

The doors of the older building that now houses Brookville High School opened in 1912. Through the doors of Brookville High School have walked thousands of young people, most of whom were intent upon preparing themselves for their place in life. Some have become outstanding members of the professions; others skilled laborers, merchants, and business men, farmers, housewives, politicians, soldiers, airmen, unskilled laborers, and some, unfortunately, drags upon society.

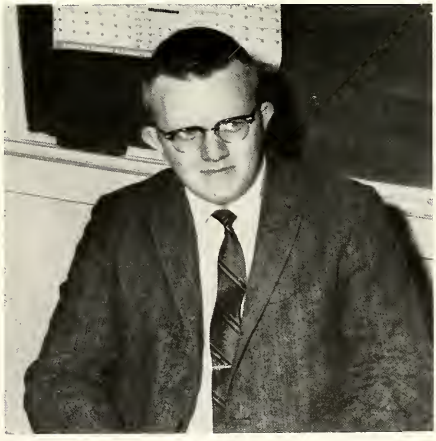

Through these doors have walked, and will walk, the dreams and ambitions of youth. How well these dreams are attained depends upon:

(a) The ambitions and desires of the student,
(b) The natural abilities of the individuals,
(c) The physical facilities offered,
(d) The faculties and their understanding of the problems that confront youth.

Walking through these doors in 1958-59 is one of the finest generations of youth the world has ever known. Most of today's youth realize that they are being confronted by problems that past generations have not faced. They realize that man, unless he is educated to believe in the brotherhood of man, has the power to extinguish life on this earth. They know that they must work unceasingly for their future, so that unborn future generations may also have the right to walk through these doors as free men.

George E. McKinney

GUIDANCE DIRECTOR

In this day and age it has become increasingly more difficult for people to understand the role that education plays in their lives. When students enter our high school, they often come with only a limited vision concerning the opportunities that lie before them. Many students never give themselves the chance to increase their vision. They fail to see beyond the immediate future. They do no planning; and when they leave, they have little to show for what they have done.

Fortunately, many students do increase their vision. They realize that high school is only a small part of their total life experience, and they leave here with a greater understanding of what is expected of them. They are ready to do whatever is necessary to further develop their understanding. For these people education never really stops, in fact they know it is merely under way when they graduated from high school.

With a development of this sort of feeling on the part of our students, no one will ever have to be concerned about the vision of those who pass "Through These Doors."

OFFICERS

Right: The Brookville Classroom Teachers' Association was happy to welcome Miss Joyce Meyer. She is a student at Indiana University and did her practice teaching in our school. She worked with Mrs. Montgomery in the first grade.

BROOKVILLE PARENT-TEACHERS' ASSOCIATION

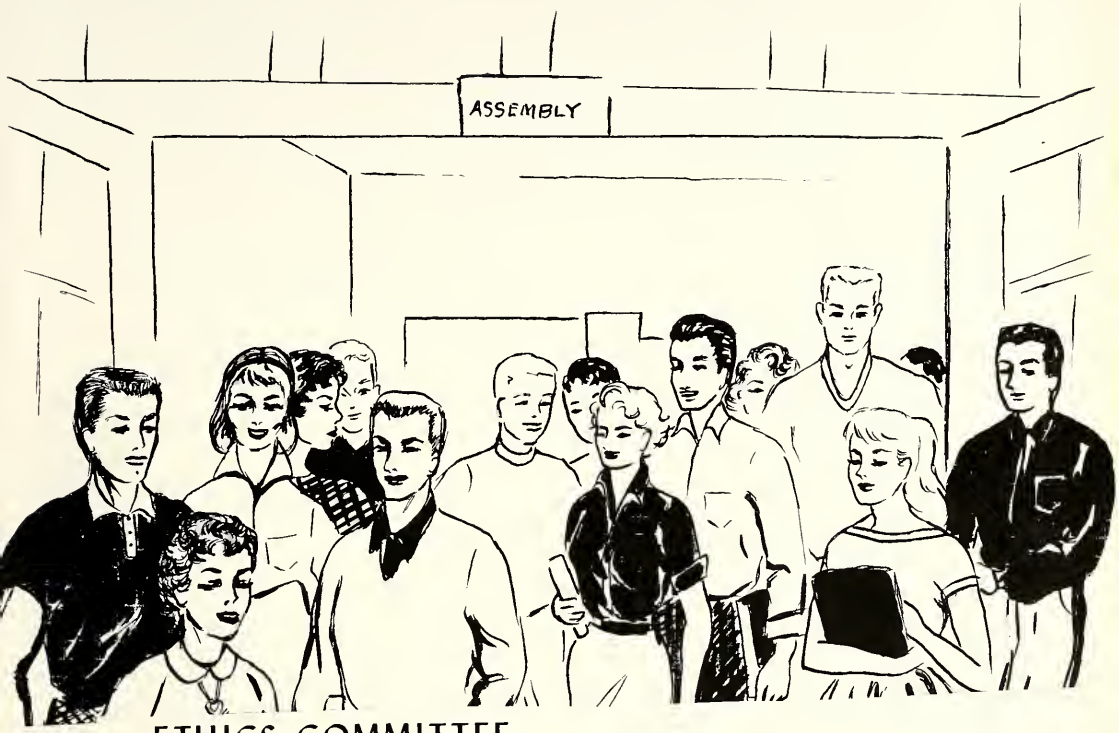

PANEL FOR FEBRUARY MEETING: Mr. Charles Zuck, school superintendent; Mr. Philip Blose, Mrs. Leo Drewes, Mr. Chester Bommer, Mr. Herman Suding.

The newly organized Parent-Teachers Association had many interesting programs, including talks by Mr. McKinney, Mr. Hauburg, and a visiting professor from Miami University who spoke on a recent visit to Russia. One program included the showing of slides taken in Alaska by Walter Smith. The February program was a panel discussion on school financing.

Officers: President, Philip Blose; Vice-President, Merrit Naylor; Secretary, Mrs. Leo Drewes; Treasurer, William Reifel.

THE CLASSES

CLASS OF 1959

OFFICERS

Class Officers: President, Joe Lakes; Vice-President, Ron Gillman; Secretary, Karen Hisesley; Treasurer, Lois Shepard.

Six curricula are offered in Bookville High School. A student is expected to choose his curriculum early in his highschool career. An attempt is made to guide him into the curriculum in which he will be the happiest and in which he can do the best work.

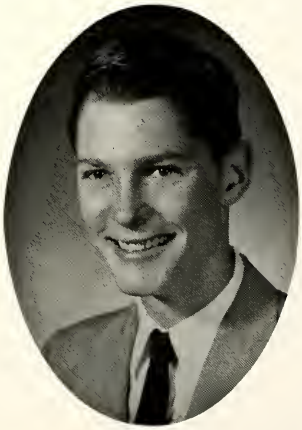

COLLEGE PREPARATORY

The main purpose of this curriculum is to prepare students for college entrance. It includes two years of foreign language, four years of English, and at least two years of mathematics.

All colleges have certain entrance requirements. Most of the professions as well as many other lines of work require a college education.

CLASS HISTORY

In 1955 the doors to our high school career were opened by 129 members.

We elected Bill Bergin, President; Joe Lakes, Vice-President; Jim Willhite, Secretary; and Mike Werner, Treasurer. Our sponsors were Mrs. Buckler, Miss Quinton, Mr. Spray, and Mr. Von Loo.

We proved ourselves very talented when we gave a variety program to the upper classmen on Freshmen Day. The big event of the year was a trip to Coney Island.

We had hardly become used to the name "Green Freshmen" when we became sophomores. During the summer our 129 members had dwindled to 123 members.

MEMORIES

GENERAL

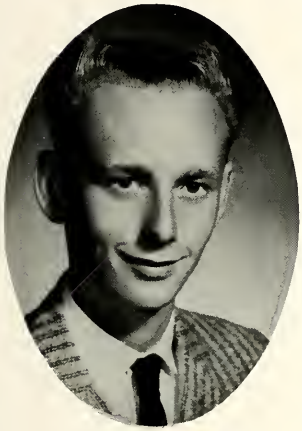

This curriculum is designed for the student who wishes to receive a good broad education with the opportunity of sampling other curricula, and graduating with majors in English and social science. Many of the students who take four years of work in this curriculum will be able to get the background necessary for those colleges which do not have a foreign language requirement. These latter include our state universities.

Joe L. Jonas

Joseph Myron Lakes

Joe Lakes was chosen to lead our class. Bill Bergin was elected Vice-President; Larry Sheets, Treasurer; and Jim Willhite Treasurer.

Miss Russey replaced Mrs. Buckler as a class sponsor the second semester.

After much debating, we selected blue and white as our class colors. Soon we were sporting blue and white class sweaters.

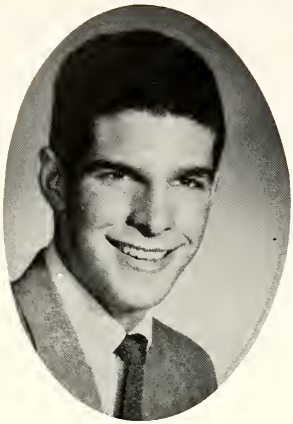

For our assembly program, we invited Rev. McRae to speak on his television experience on the "This Is Your Life" program.

We also sported a new feather in our cap at the end of the year. We were victors in the "church attendance poll."

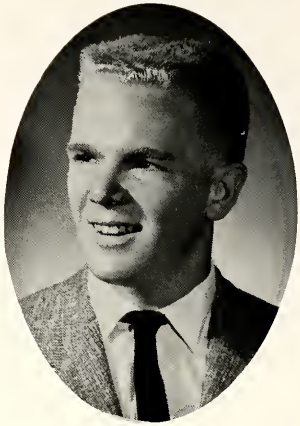

At the end of our sophomore year we went on a picnic to Whitewater Park.

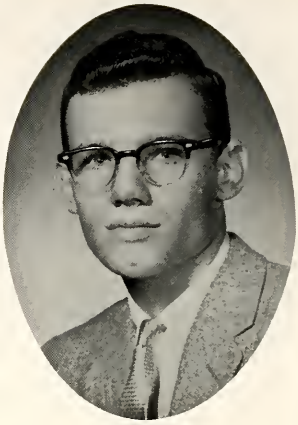

At the beginning of our Junior year, there were 97 members of our class. We elected Joe Lakes President; and Larry Sheets, Vice-President.

COMMERCIAL

The commercial courses have two fundamental objectives:

(1) To familiarize the student with general business practices so that he may be equipped to carry out the ordinary business transactions for everyday living, and,

(2) To give the student, who has ability and willingness to work, the training necessary to enable him to secure and hold a position after graduation, or to give him a fondation for further training.

Apt students who work seriously in this course are prepared to go directly into office work. Others may need additional training in a business school, but the time of attendance is shortened because of the high school training.

Lois Shepard represented our class as an attendant in the Homecoming Queen's court. We were the proud recipients of the award for the "most beautiful" Homecoming float. We had selected the title of our float, "Rainbow Means Victory," to coincide with the selection of our class rings, "Rainbow Fire."

Around Christmas time, our shiny new rings arrived.

The proceeds from our class play, "Rest Assured," directed by Miss Quinton, started our Washington Trip Fund. The play was a "howling" success.

Later in the year, we treated the student body to more laughs and comedy when we presented our assembly program which had a hillbilly flavor.

In the fall of 1958, our class of 85 members opened the doors to our last year at Brookville High School. After eleven long struggling years, we finally realized the coveted goal of becoming important Seniors. The year was filled with many exciting events and important decisions.

The first order of business was to choose the students who would guide us through these decisions. Joe Lakes was again elected President; Ron Gillman, Vice-President; Karen Hinesley, Secretary; and Lois Shepard, Treasurer. Our faculty advisers were Miss Quinton, Mr. Van Loo, and Mr. Codiano.

One day early in the year, some strange young men were seen roaming the halls. We soon discovered that they were not strangers but were our own casual sweater-and-shirt- type boys who had suddenly been transformed into smart looking young men by their tailored suits and ties. The occasion? Our Senior pictures were taken that day. They arrived around the middle of November.

Name cards were ordered and exchanged, and we were soon fitted for caps and gown. This reminded us of graduation time was not far away.

Our last homecoming game proved to be very eventful for the Senior Class. Mary Ann Harnishieger was elected to reign as Homecoming Queen; and our float, "Stars of "59," was given the award as the "Most beautiful."

INDUSTRIAL ARTS

The work in this curriculum offers opportunities to boys who are apt in doing work of a mechanical nature. The training is made as varied as possible in order that the student may discover an interest or a special ability. Classes offered give the student fundamental training needed for many occupations.

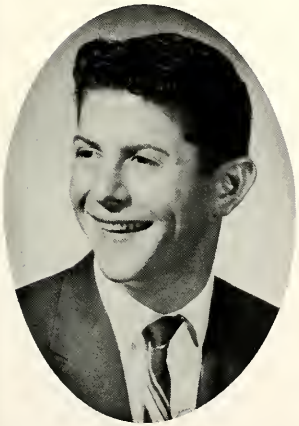

Some students may wish to go on to college and become teachers in this field. Others may wish to take more advanced courses after high school in a technical school.

Soon afterward, we presented our senior Play "Father's Been to Mars." This helped us to increase our Washington Trip Fund.

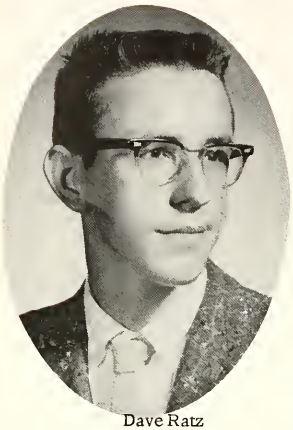

One of the highly prized honors a senior girl can receive is the D.A.R. award which is based on dependability, service, leadership, and patriotism. The girl selected for the award this year was Karen Hinesley.

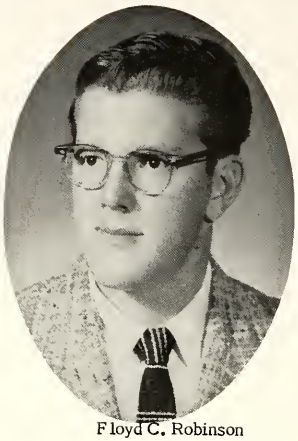

For our remaining money making project, we chose to have chicken supper. This netted a substantial profit to be added to our Washington Trip Fund, which made us feel sure we would soon be or our way to Washington D.C.

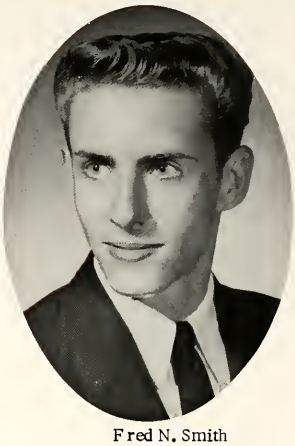

The busy year was drawing to a close, for we were busy making our plans for the long awaited trip.

VISIT LEGISLATURE

Each year that the Indiana State Legislature meets, Seniors ranking high on a test in United States Government visit the Legislature and other interesting places in Indianapolis. The following Seniors were chosen to make the trip in 1959.

E. Minneman, K. Hinesley, N. Begley, S. Nutty, D. Anspach, M. Hodapp, J. Cornelius, P. Gordon, J. Price, W. Bergin, S. Snider, M. Amrhein, B. Bischoff, P. Bischoff, L. Clark, N. Crosier, M. Kuntz, V. Ford, D. Race.

The work in this curriculum is beneficial to any girl. It is designed primarily to prepare girls to be efficient home-makers.

There are vocational opportunities to be found in this field. Some students wish to get further training and become home economics teachers. Further training will also enable many girls to become dress-makers, buyers, decorators, milliners, or dieticians.

We will probably be like all the other classes, so glad to be home to get some much needed sleep that we will forget about the studying we shall have to be doing very soon for our final examinations.

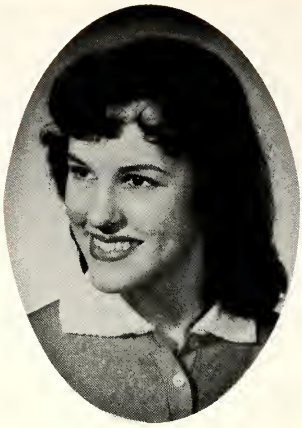

Upon our return we shall soon be marching in solemn procession at our Baccalaureate and Commencement.

It will be with mixed feelings that we receive our diplimas. We will be closing the doors on our high school days, but we shall also be opening the doors to the new life which lay before us.

AGRICULTURE

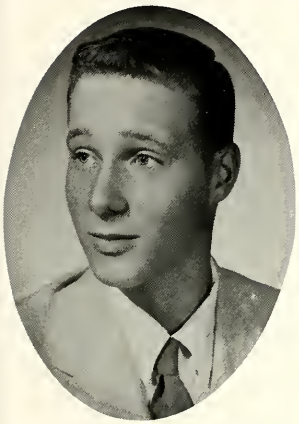

The work in this curriculum is almost a necessity for every boy who lives on a farm and expects to continue as a farmer. Farming is rapidly becoming a highly scientific occupation. It is no longer an occupation at which anyone in good health can succeed.

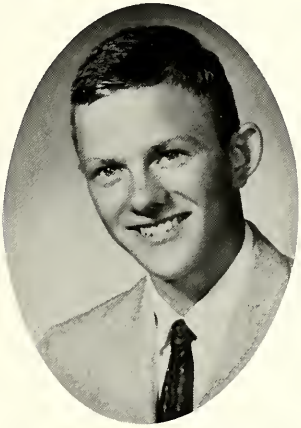

Many boys who have taken the courses in this curriculum see the importance of college training. There are for them many opportunities for employment in specialized professions associated with agriculture.

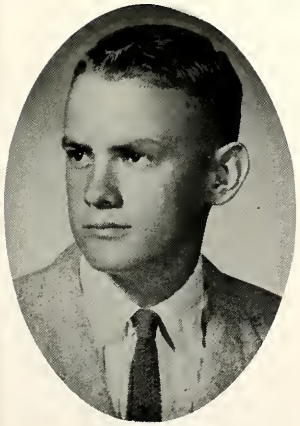

The students of the class of 1959 will enter many different professions and occupations. Some will go to college, others will establish homes after graduation, others will get jobs. All will be better workers and better citizens because they had the opportunity to get a high school education.

Founded some twenty-three years ago by a group of parents interested in promoting music in the school, particularly the band, the Band Boosters organization has earned recognition as an important agent in helping our band to become what it is today. The primary purpose of the organization was to raise funds for the purchase of the first regulation uniforms, which was a tremendous undertaking for a new organization. During this first fund raising campaign the public in general became conscious of the band as an important element in the life of the community as well as the school, and interest in the music department was stimulated. In addition to furnishing and maintaining uniforms, the Band Boosters have contributed many other items of equipment, instruments, music, etc., in addition to what could be furnished by the school board. The snappy new uniforms purchased last year are the result of a gigantic solicitation campaign carried on by Band Boosters, the success of which indicates the widespread interest in the band.

MY DAY

The first is physics;
Man! It's tough.
I'm so stupid,
The teacher's so tough.

The second is English;
That's a dilly.
I surely do try, but
My themes are silly.

The third is geometry,
Oh! What a pain;
I see that in dreams
Over and over again.

The fourth is G. A. A.;
It runs a smooth track.
All we do is tramp to
The ball park and back.

The fifth is phys. ed.;
Now isn't this dumb?
Just left the ballpark;
Back again you come.

The sixth is biology;
This I just don't "dig"
Trying to figure out
The parts of a pig.

The seventh is the last;
You just wait and see,
Typing will surely
Be the end of me.

FOOTBALL SEASON

Football season's here again
With all its fulfilled glory;
Time for bonfires on cold nights
To tell their autumn story.
All the "bloody" madness of
"Hold that line" and such,
And the cheers, the crowds of kids
That fill the stands so much.
And, oh, the gloom of losing and
Oh, the joy of winning;
Always sets the fun-filled days
Of football season spinning.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY, MR. LINCOLN

I WISH I COULD HAVE KNOWN LINCOLN

I wish I could have known Lincoln. To those who knew him, he was both sad and funny, kind and determined, ugly and noble. He was a slow-moving kind of man, they say. Stories were told about him. They were almost always good stories, which showed how much people liked him. Many of them told about his going out of his way to help others. These tales show that Lincoln was a real person, the kind people could love.

Janet Mergenthal, Grade 8

I wish I could have known Lincoln. He traveled miles to pay his debts, and return borrowed articles such as books. He would read these books at night by the light of the open fire. He was intelligent but had little schooling. He was religious and had a good sense of humor. He believed in freedom for everyone and fought for it.

Eugene Stewart, Grade 8

I wish I could have known Lincoln because he understood people and their problems. He liked to tell jokes and make them happy. He was always willing to learn. He believed in the Union and worked to preserve it. He loved all the people in the North and in the South. After the war, he wanted to forgive the South for what it had done. He wrote letters to parents who had lost sons in the war, and in those letters he told them how sorry he felt. He was truly a great man. Yes, I wish I could have known Lincoln.

Sheila Gray, Grade 8

LINCOLN LOVED PEOPLE

Lincoln's love for people was very great. He was honest, and he was kind. Even when he had on his best clothes, he was always willing to help people. One time he carried a trunk to the train for a girl who thought that the delivery man wasn't going to come after it. Men, women, and children all loved this kind man. Perhaps his kindness earned their votes and made him President. We still love him and are thankful for his contribution to our country's welfare.

Oletha Minneman, Grade 8

Abraham Lincoln loved people, He liked to see people happy and enjoyed making them laugh. The little boys who lived in his neighbothood would tie a string across the street to see his stovepipe hat fall off when he stumbled. Lincoln knew the string was there, but he would let his hat fall just to make the little boys happy.

Beverly Blose, Grade 8

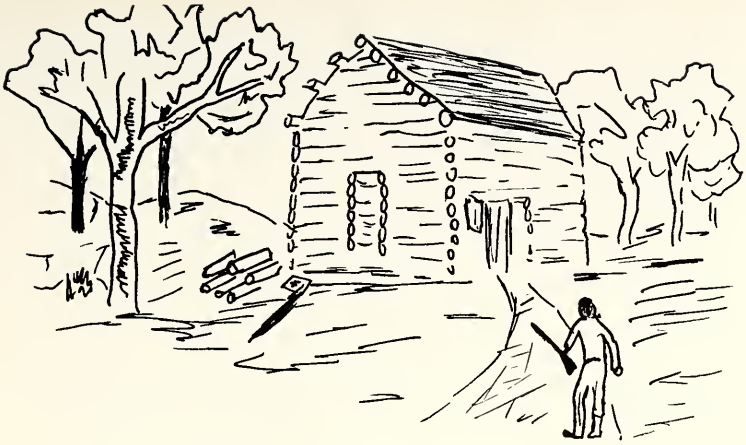

LINCOLN WAS KIND TO THE SOLDIERS

Lincoln visited the hospitals often. He would visit each man and talk to him. He would talk to Confederate soldiers as well as to Union soldiers. His sympathy for soldiers in pain was always deep and tender.

When Stonewall Jackson was killed during the Civil War, a Washington paper published an article giving high praise to Jackson. Lincoln wrote a personal letter to the editor commending him for the stand he had taken.

Lincoln was criticized for the many reprieves and pardons he issued. His greatness was beyond the understanding of many, but it will live forever.

Roger Beneker, Grade 8

In 1809 was born a babe
Now known as Honest Abe.
He was really very smart,
And he really had a heart.
Donna Lohrey, Grade 8

I wish I could have known Lincoln,
Although he didn't know me.
I wish I could have known Lincoln,
For a great man was he.
I would have loved to talk with Lincoln,
About the war and such.
I would have loved to talk with Lincoln.
He'd have taught me, oh, so much.
Beth Mullin, Grade 8

Lincoln was a very kind man,
Who loved the people, one and all,
And when the Civil War was started,
He couldn't see the Union fall.
He decided to win that awful war;
He wanted to see the Union strong,
And not only that, but also because,
He thought that slavery was terribly wrong.
Janet Mergenthal, Grade 8

Lincoln loved the people;
He loved the land.
Abraham Lincoln
Was a mighty man.
He always wore a smile
Wherever he would be;
I wish I could have known him,
I really do, indeed.
Nancy Naylor, Grade 8

A football coach's dream,
Would have been Lincoln.
Star on a basketball team,
Could have been Lincoln.
A president supreme,
That was Lincoln.
Eugene Stewart, Grade 8

Lincoln was a great man;
He loved the people;
He loved the land.
He didn't want war
To kill and destroy,
For he loved the people,
And he loved the land.
Lincoln was a great man.
Beverly Blose, Grade 8

MY FLOOD JOURNAL

The rain began Tuesday night about the time I arrived home from the Polio Benefit Game. Mother met me at the door with a perplexed look on her face, asking if the noisy clamor on the window was sleet or rain.

All night the rain dinned against my bedroom window. I awakened the next morning only to find that the rain hadn't ceased. I was soon dressed and on my way to school.

When I arrived at school, I was informed that many of the school buses had not come to school inasmuch as the rain had created high waters, making their routes impassable.

All morning we heard the ring of Mr. McKinney's bell over the public-address system, after which he would proclaim that someone's bus was going to leave.

Almost everyone, including me, secretly hoped that the condition of the roads and the rain would cause school to be dismissed.

However, after lunch our apprenhension of the situation became quite grave when we heard classmate after classmate called from our rooms to aid their parents in packing their possessions and evacuation their homes.

All afternoon bits of news of the condition of the levee drifted into the different classrooms.

At three o'clock, the siren wailed, signaling all firemen to report to the courthouse. Shortly after this warning signal, the news arrived at school that the levee had just broken, causing the water to rush into the lower part of the valley. School was then dismissed.

As I was walking home, I saw trucks and cars burdened with house-hold belongings hastening to and from the valley. Arriving home, I found friends of our family moving their furniture into our garage.

Daddy arrived home about six-thirty that evening, weary and exhausted as a result of assisting families in their ill fortune. He told us that he had found a small dog stranded on the platform of his bulk plant, and had put it inside the plant, where it would be dry and harbored from the rain.

Throughout supper Daddy and I hinted to bring the dog to the house, suggesting that the water might reach the poor, defenseless dog. Mother finally consented to let us bring the dog home, providing it would be put in the basement. Daddy put on his hip boots, I grabbed a large towel and a flashlight, and we hurried to complete our rescue mission. Daddy and I had to crawl down a steep hill to reach the plant, since the water had already covered the road leading to it.

When we reached the little fellow, he was so excited to see us that he jumped into Daddy's arms. Daddy handed him to me, and I hastily wrapped the towel around him.

When we brought him home, Mother made us keep our part of the bargain by putting him in the basement.

Daddy and I gave the dog a bath and dried him well so he wouldn't catch cold. Before we knew it, Mother was joining us in caring for our new dog. Daddy and I schemed and hinted until finally mother gave in and approved of the dog's being allowed upstairs.

About ten o'clock Mother and I took a ride. We witnessed the flood scene from the hill by Saint Michael's Church. Water surrounded all the homes in the valley from First Street over to Fouth Street.

Thursday we had no school. As usual, Mother had to go to school; and daddy went to work. As Mother was leaving for school, she turned and said to the dog, "Poor little Black Sambo, at least you'll be dry today." Our dog now had a name -- Sambo.

Sambo and I became well acquainted that day; and before Mother and Daddy came home that evening, I had shortened his name to Bo.

Thursday evening the flood waters diminished and Brookville began to clear away the debris of the flood.

AFTERMATH OF THE FLOOD

The river is merely a rippling stream now as it flows along, picketed by brush bedecked sycamore skeletons, through the irregular fields in the river bottoms. Today, its clear, blue water reflects each sunbeam, but two weeks ago its wild, brown waters would not return a single ray. Fences, woven with fibers of weeds and branches, run the lines separating desolate fields, strewn with debris and coated with black, river mud. A vacated house stands amid the confused wreckage of the farm lot. The top half of the house is white; but the bottom half is dingy brown, painted so by the angry floodwater.

THE WEEPING WILLOW

The willow, standing straight and tall beside the singing river, laughed as the wind blew through his merry branches. The day being warm, the young willow had frolicked happily above the grassy bank singing melodies to the delighted waves.

As a willow sang a happy song, a small, weary child stopped to rest beneath his shady branches. Now it happened that this child was a goddess, the Goddess of Tears. While wandering over the hills, the goddess had grown fretful and, seating herself beneath the willow, cried out in a sobbing voice, "Oh, Willow, how can you be so happy?" The young willow tittered with laughter, for he greatly enjoyed the warm sunshine.

High above them, the Rain God, resting on a cloud, heard the child's shrieking voice, grew frightened, and went racing across the sky, sending showers of rain drops upon them.

When the rain had ceased, the goddess jumped from her perch screaming, "Oh, no! Look at my new robes!" She then fell to the wet bank, sobbing as if her heart were broken.

The willow, waving his leaves in the chilly breeze, murmured in a soft, kind voice, "Ah - ah -h, if I could only help you." His wish was heard by the Goddess of the Sunshine. She quickly dried the tears from the child's eyes, caught her in the heavens where you often see her flashing about in rainbow colors. They call her the Northern Lights.

The teardrops that fell from the child's eyes landed in the willow tree, bearing down its branches with their heavy weight. To this day, hanging his drooping branches over the gay, swishing river, the willow weeps.

OSCAR

I am new around Brookville High School, having just moved here from Chicago at the beginning of the school year. I haven't made many friends so you see I'm rather lonely, as most new teachers usually are. And the future doesn't promise to be overcrowded with friends either, for the students rather shun me. They think the subject I teach is uninteresting. I'v made a few friends though, the closest being the biology teacher. He's quite a guy; treats me just like a father.

I have an uneven disposition; that is, I'm likely to fly apart at the touch of a feather. I'm not very talkative. In fact, if let alone, you seldom hear a peep out of me.

Like most people, I have hobbies. The one I like most is watching the fish; I often spend hours at it. It's unusual, but I love it.

Chances are that you haven't become too well acquainted with me yet, but I think you will before you finish high school. You will know me by my healthy physique offset by a rather sparse amount of hair on my head, and I'm short compared to most teachers. You won't see me around too often, but, when you do, you will never forget me. (Oscar, the Biology Manikin)

ROCKET TO THE MOON

It was a cold day at the rocket base. The sky was overcast and gloomy. The workmen stood trying to keep their hands warm as they loaded the liquid oxygen into the tanks aboard the "Lucky Lady," the hopes and dreams of every man on project "Big Jump."

In the control room, the engineers and trackers checked and double-checked every instrument on the panels. A small error now would mean disaster and failure. As each instrument checked out, the launching became more certain. In the flight room, final preparations were made. The crew became tense and tried to remember all their months of briefing and training.

At last the time came for the take-off. The crew was lifted to their places in the ship. A final check was made. The count-down began. The radar was sweeping the sky. Ten seconds left. Nine, eight, seven, the area was deserted! Three, two, one, blast off! The Lucky Lady was on its way to the moon.

THE FIRST STORM

One lone cow and her calf, unprotected from the driving winds and rains, stand serenely in the open field of brown grass. An orange sunset glowing through the heavy black clouds makes the jagged knives of lightning even more fiery when they slash the heavens. Hard pellets of water beat down mercilessly on the young calf who is just experiencing his first summer rainstorm. The howling winds suddenly cease yelling; and, as if in obedience to a command, the rains dwindle. The empty rain clouds slowly lift; and through the drizzle, a rainbow promises that the storm is over.

CLOSE THAT REFRIGERATOR DOOR, ELMO!

Many people are wondering why the past winter was so bitter here. This explanation will enable them to fully understand the conditions which caused this severe weather.

Before Elmo Furd of Smerdsberg, Missouri, departed for a winter long Jamaica vacation, he left his refrigerator door open. This caused a permanent low pressure area in Smerdsberg.

All winter long, Hortense Gowznofske of Chicago was maintaining a marathon telephone argument. This directed strong winds in this direction.

Meanwhile, Elmo was having a prolonged tantrum due to "the big one that got away" in Jamaica. (More gales were launched toward this area.)

In order to avoid Smerdsberg's low pressure area, the forceful winds both veered toward this district. Here they clashed, forming precipitation and foul weather.

A SUMMER SUNRISE

Over the eastern sky a glint of light hints that a new day will soon begin. A hoarse crow of a rooster sounds through the barnyard, proclaiming to all that it is morning. Streaks of light shine through the knotted pine and drooping willow, turning the fog into dew. Meadowlarks and grasshoppers in the hayfield across the road start singing and buzzing. Six black and white holsteins with heavy udders slowly wind their way up the dusty cowpath toward the barn.

Mike Amrhein, Senior

WINTER'S MAGIC

During the night a heavy snow had fallen. The dull, moonless sky was solidly overcast. A cold brisk wind was howling around the corner of a small brick house, warning the occupants of bitter, raw, zero weather. Glistening snow, clinging to the spirea bushes, bent their long slender branches to the frozen ground. A tiny stream with icy edges wound around a long sloping hill and tapered off out of sight. A drift of snow had settled against a broken fence in the yard.

WALKERS

It is interesting to watch people as they walk down the street. The man with the big cigar struts -- with his head held high. The farmer, tired and worn, in town for supplies, walks slowly with his hands in his coverall pockets. The busy housewife rushes about doing her shopping and tries to catch her little girl who has run on ahead. A few small, ruddy-faced boys eye wishfully the cars, trucks, and guns in the store windows. High school boys and girls talk gayly as they wait to catch the school bus. A young office girl hurries to her job, intent on making a good impression. They all have something in common. They are walking the streets of my town.

Janet Lowery, Junior

CONFUSION

In the south hallway of the gymnasium a small cluster of students crowded around their leader. Stacks of school books were scattered over the tile floor. Shrill giggles and deep chuckles were heard above the thumping of the basketballs in the gym. A blond teen-ager banged a tune on the badly scratched piano. A black top hat lay on the floor beside a battered straw hat. White Ostrich feathers had been tossed into a paper sack, and some old silk dresses peeped out beneath their covers. A filmy peach dress had been tossed over a waste container; coats had been discarded. The juniors were getting ready to practice for their assembly program.

Winona Tonne, Junior

STRUGGLE FOR LIFE

There lay the newborn pig, worn and petered out. It lay in the straw barely moving, uttering low heart rending cries. It would take no milk. The straw around it made soft its bed and comforted its small body. The heat from a lamp seemed not to warm the almost lifeless form. It was pathetic to watch it struggle, try so hard to live. It would gasp, then cry out, its form going limp. Its little feet were moving as though it were trying to walk away. Away to where? Finally its small body gave a wrench. Its heart beat no more.

Eleanor Marie Powell, Junior

FIRE "DRILL?"

The fire bell sounded! The children left their seats and marched, like soldiers, to the door as they had done in other fire drills. Miss Hensley checked the windows in the room. She then followed the children toward the hall. When the door was opened, black smoke poured in! The exuberance of the children turned to wide-eyed panic. They crowded back into the classrooms. With the hall blocked, Miss Hensley searched her mind for a means of escape. Since her classroom was on the first floor, the logical route was through windows; but the children were afraid. She went to one of the boys and asked him to jump first. After a lot of coaxing, the sight of firemen below persuaded the boy to make the jump safely. The others, seeing one person safe, followed readily.

CLASS OF 1958

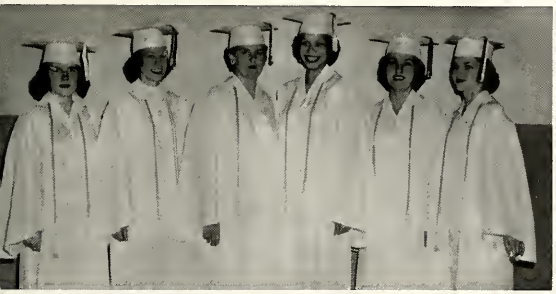

The graduating class of 1958 will be long remembered as the first class to graduate in the new gymnasium. It will also be remembered as a class having many members who made excellent high school records in athletics, school leadership, and especially in scholarship.

The seventy-nine seniors marched to the stage while the school orchestra played "Pomp and Circumstance." Father Saum, pastor of St. Michaels Church, gave the invocation. The speaker was Mr. Jackson Raney. He gave an inspiring talk to an attentive audience.

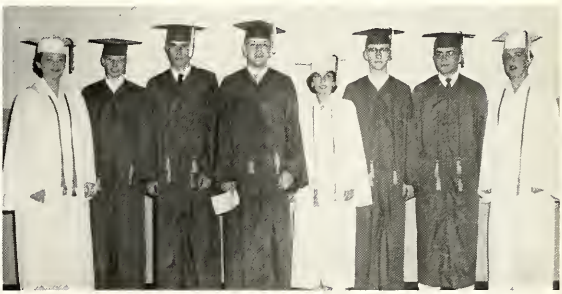

The presentation of an unusual number of awards was made by Mr. George McKinney. Mr. Charles Zuck, School Superintendent, presented the diplomas.

HONOR GRADUATES

HIGH HONORS

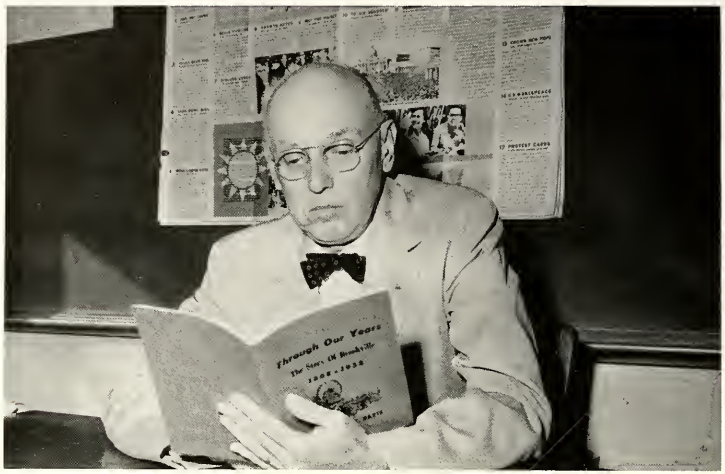

HONORS

HIGH HONORS: Elizabeth Preston, Georgianna Tonne, Joyce Holmes, Joan Taylor, Francelia Wyatt, and Anna Marie Lewis. HONORS: Virginia Chaddon, William Wolber, Wilbur Stang, Robert Cly, Wanda York, Thomas Gantner, Richard Naylor, and Myrna Strohmier.

MR. DAVIS, FACULTY MEMBER, IS AUTHOR OF "THROUGH OUR YEARS"

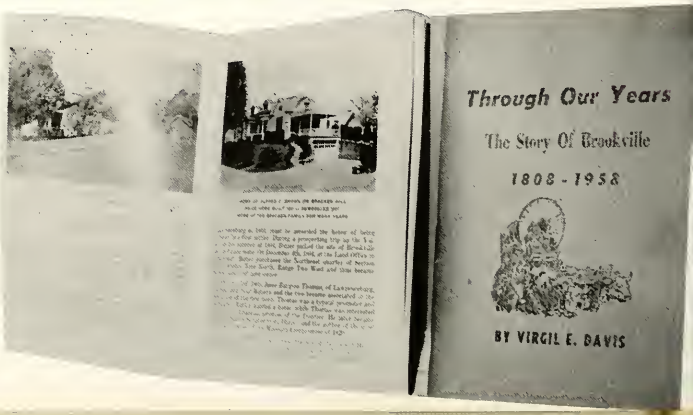

Brookville and Franklin County has a heritage of which we can all be proud. It was, therefore, obligatory to celebrate in some fitting manner the one hundred fifthieth year of our life as a town and community. To condense the story of those weeks and months from late November, 1957 when the first faltering steps were taken until the week of June 14th to 21st, 1958 when all the world could see the results of the untold hours of work, and research, and thought, and pure physical labor, is impossible within the present limitations. Suffice to say a non-profit corporation was formed; a very capable General Chairman in the person of Frank Otto was selected; committees were set up with specific and definite duties to perform; money was raised; the John B. Rogers Company was employed to direct and supervise the Pageant; the public was invited to participate and the "great adventure" was under way.

All organizations within the County that were asked showed a willingness to help and all persons co-operated, both by actually taking part either as a member of some committee in the Pageant, or in a substantial financial way. This applies to the students of Brookville Consolidated Schools for without their help the Sesquicentennial would not have been the very great success that it was. It is impossible to name all the students taking part because of space limitations. The following faculty members co-operated in some way to the Sesquicentennial Celebration: Charles L. Zuck. Robert Bunz, Joseph Codiano, Charles Sprague, Charles Van Loo, Eugene Ernst, Mary Rose Quick, Ralph Froman, Arthur Beckman, Kathryn Quinton, Ralph Wulber, and Virgil E. Davis.

You may be assured that those in charge of the Sesquicentennial Celebration appreciate to the highest degree, the active participation of the students and faculty of Brookville Consolidated Schools.
